Fulton Cotton Gin Destroyed By Fire

Cox & Son Plant Is Afire At Noon, Loss Is $20,000

Blaze In Press Spreads To Plant and Seed House

OIL TANK EXPLODES

Blazing Fuel Hurled Over Building Shortly After Start

Fire believed to have started in the press, swept the cotton gin property of W. E. Cox & Son at Fulton shortly after noon today, with $18,000 to $20,000 damage.

Starting at 12:30 o'clock the flames quickly consumed the gin building and one seed house.

At 1:30 o'clock telephone messages to The Star from Fulton indicated that the fire was under control, with the two remaining seed houses probably saved.

The loss at the gin was reported as between $15,000 and $16,000 with damage to the seed house at $3,000 or $4,000.

It was not determined at once how the fire started, but it was said to have been discovered in the press, from which it spread rapidly.

The plant is operated by a crude oil engine, and about five minutes after the start of the fire, the fuel tanks feeding the engine exploded and hurled blazing oil over the plant.

So far as The Star could learn at 2 o'clock, nobody has been injured, although the fire was one of the worst in the history of Fulton.

Boy Badly Bruised When Struck By Car

Late Tuesday afternoon the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Bates, crossing the street, was struck by a passing auto and badly bruised and shaken but today the youngster is resting easily.

There were no witnesses to the accident, so far as can be ascertained, though W. G. Lewis was sitting in his son's service station a short distance away when it occurred. He was one among the first to reach the scene. The little fellow's mother carried him home and medical attention was given and he is expected to recover. It is not known who was driving the car which struck him.

Bargain Offer for Mail Subscribers

For Limited Time Only You May Secure Star At A Bargain.

Dozens of new subscribers to the Hope Star have been added to the rural routes of this trade territory and a large number of renewals have been placed as a result of the special compilation rate which was recently announced by this newspaper.

Within the limits of Hope trade territory, which includes Hempstead, Miller, Nevada, Howard and Lafayette counties, Star will be delivered by mail, along with the Arkansas Farmer, the state's farm journal, both for $2.95 for one year. The regular rate of the Star by mail is $3.00, and the regular rate of the Arkansas Farmer is 50¢ a year, netting a saving of 5¢ to each subscriber. This offer is for a limited time only and may be withdrawn without notice.

The Weekly Star and the Arkansas Farmer will be delivered by mail for one year for only $1.00 at a special rate for a limited time. The Weekly Star is a condensed version of the Hope Star, featuring the news of this section of the state, and a good serial story.

The Arkansas Farmer is a splendid farm journal which should be on the reading table of every farmer in Arkansas. The Hope Star brings you the news of Hope, of the vast Hope trade territory, the news of Arkansas, and in fact the entire country, along with a complete range of interesting features, appealing to all ages and all classes. This special offer is made for the express purpose of increasing the number of subscribers to Hope's two newspapers. Subscribe before the bargain offer is withdrawn.

Flyer Not Sighted Since Taking Off

Cattleman On Atlantic Hop Is Unreported Since Start

(By the Associated Press)

More than 24 hours after taking off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland on an unannounced solo hop across the north Atlantic to London, nothing had been seen or heard of Uhan F. Dieteman, Jr., and his plane, the "Golden Hind."

Stepping casually into his little low-winged monoplane at 10:45 yesterday, the Montana cattleman who has been flying but two and one-half years headed his plane out into a clear Atlantic day.

He had 165 gallons of gasoline aboard which air men say meant conservatively 25 hours flying time but with favorable winds would carry him beyond that time.

Close Watch Kept

All along the English and Irish coasts sharp lookouts are being kept but there has been no sign of the plane. Dieteman's little ship, believed to be the smallest in which any man has ever dared the ocean hop, would be but a speck in an infinite expanse of sky and sighting it from a ship would be a matter of rare luck.

Daughters Meet In Opening Session 34th Convention

"Welcome Evening" Is Most Brilliant Event and Well Attended

MANY ATTENDING Delegates From Over State and Many Visitors are Here

By MRS. SHIRLEY HENRY

The Annual State Convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy opened last evening with a welcome program at 8 o'clock at the City Auditorium, which was beautifully and appropriately decorated with lovely roses, potted plants and flags of the Confederacy, some torn and bullet riddled, interspersed with the stars and stripes, the flags of adjoining states and different chapters and organizations represented in this 34th convention.

The opening scene was an impressive one, when the procession, including the convention pages, division officers and distinguished guests, passed down the aisle to the stage where they were seated. Dr. W. A. Bowen, pastor of the First Baptist Church gave the invocation.

Beautiful vocal music was rendered by Mrs. Talbot Field, a local favorite. Mrs. Ruth Hardin a sweet singer from Fort Smith and Mrs. Earl Hayden, prominent in Texarkana music circles, with accompaniments by Mrs. Ralph Routon of this city, Miss Bessie Westmoreland, city, and Mrs. Esther Mills Wood of Texarkana, guest teacher of the Chicago Musical college.

Honorable E. F. McFadden welcomed the guests in behalf of The Chamber of Commerce, The Rotarians and the American Legion.

The welcome from the Kiwanis Club was delivered by Mr. Pohn P. Cox and Miss Beryl Henry spoke words of greeting from the Hope Business and Professional Women's Club. Mrs. Charles Haynes the retiring Pat Cleburne president then extended the welcome from the Mother Chapter. Mrs. George Hughes of Benton, Past Division President, responded to these welcome addresses.

Mrs. Charles Haynes who presided over the evening's program then presented Mrs. John Weinman, of Little Rock, Division President, who then gave the president annual address telling of the achievements, and the plans for

Storms Strike In Great Lakes Area

Wind, Snow and Sleet On Lake Force Craft To Shelter

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—(AP)—At least three steamers have been driven ashore and many forced to seek shelter while others battled their way through heavy seas, accompanied by rain, snow and sleet which swept the Great Lakes yesterday and continued today.

Two vessels were ashore off Leamington, in Lake Erie. A third was aground in Lake Huron and another was reported adrift in Lake Superior.

The ships in distress off Leamington are the N. J. Nesson, a wooden vessel 140 feet long, and the steel sand sucker C. W. Caldwell, 152 feet long. In Lake Huron off Magnetic Reef the freighter Maple Court, of the Canada Steamship line, is a shore and receiving a hard pounding.

An effort was made to keep news of the accident from the President and he left Indiana shores for Louisville, Ky., apparently without knowledge that anything had happened.

The first fatality reported was Mrs. Frances Bryan, 43, housekeeper on a houseboat used as a boat every 1000 feet off shore at New Baltimore, on Lake St. Clair, who lost her life in the collapse of the structure. Unconfirmed reports said that five men were marooned in other boat houses.

Indiana Is Host To Chief Executive

President Spends A Few Minutes In Madison En Route To Louisville

MADISON, Ind., Oct. 23.—(AP)—President Hoover paid a brief visit today, braving chill winds and rain to greet the crowd which gathered at the Madison docks where the President's river boat tied up for a few minutes.

Tragedy threatened to mar the Indiana greeting as four Indiana guardsmen were seriously injured and burned in a futile effort to fire a presidential salute. Dampened powder exploded prematurely and two of the guardsmen suffered broken legs. All were taken to the hospital.

The prisoners forwarded to Little Rock today were:

Sam Hansford, manufacturing liquor and possessing a still, one year each, sentences to run concurrently.

A coroner's investigation was underway today to determine the caliber of the bullets which killed the three.

The Children Talk

John, 13, and Nancy, 15, Stark's children and the only eye witnesses to the killings, said their father was shot by Heath and was quoted by Sheriff Nance as saying that Stillwell fired at Heath.

Willie Powell, two charges of grand larceny, one year each, concurrently.

Willie Shaw, burglary, two years in the Industrial School.

Henry Welsh, burglary, two years, grand larceny, one year, concurrently.

Jesse Lewis, grand larceny, one year.

Lonnie Norvell, two charges of grand larceny, one year each, concurrently.

Reedy Tarter, two charges of grand larceny, one year each, concurrently.

Tom Trigg, possessing a still, one year.

W. D. Daniel, robbery, three years.

Paul Anderson, grand larceny, one year in the reform school.

Piece Stories Together

The accounts of the shooting as pieced together from the stories of the two children and Stillwell was that Heath, who was living on a houseboat in White river, suspected Stark of stealing two dollars from him. Stark also lived on a houseboat. Heath found Stark and his two children picking cotton in Ash's field. He accused Stark of the theft and the firing started.

Stillwell, riding over the farm to protect the pecan crop against the theft, came up and an exchange of shots followed.

No charge was filed against Stillwell pending outcome of the investigation, sheriff Nance said.

Crossing Crash Takes Another Human Toll

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Three persons were killed and four injured near Rockville, Md., early today when a B. & O. locomotive crashed into a motor car.

The big shovel on this stretch working nights, the fleet of trucks roaring as they move their loads to designated points, makes an interesting sight, one that should be seen to gain an idea of the magnitude of the work the highway department is doing.

Much Dirt Moved

The contract quantity of earth to be moved on this job is 243,000 cubic yards. Of this amount, more than 60,000 has been shoveled or slipped out. On the west side, from the bridge to the viaduct over the Missouri Pacific, the contract calls for moving 160,000 yards of dirt. However, the shovel there has moved as much as 130,000 yards in a month and this work is expected to be completed by December 15.

Right of Way Cleared

The right-of-way from Hope to Fulton, with exception of a small stretch in Black Bois d'Arc bottoms, has been cleared. Dirt crews are working from Guernsey, west, meeting those coming east from the river.

An Educational Problem

SHORTLY after the close of the war, heads of American colleges and universities found themselves confronted by a new problem; young men and women were coming to college in such rapidly-increasing numbers that there was hardly enough accommodation for them.

For a number of years this tendency continued. Every institution of higher education in the country, probably, increased its enrollment. Classes were swollen. Buildings were jammed.

This brought several secondary problems. Educators discovered that many of the new students were not of the type ordinarily seen in college. They seemed to have little real thirst for knowledge; rather, it appeared that they had come to college because they felt that a college education, in some mysterious way, would make it easier for them to "get on" in life later on—that it would open the doors of prosperity to them, automatically.

Now, however, times seem to be changing. Dr. Adam Leroy Jones, director of admissions at Columbia University, reports that the rush to enter college is about over. The increase in enrollment at our colleges is getting lower each year. In 22 states last year there were actually fewer college students than there were the year before.

For the present, this is probably a good thing. No one gained anything from the presence in our colleges of young people who did not understand just what a college education was for. The idea that one goes to college solely to be able to make more money in adult life than would otherwise be possible is not a healthy one.

Eventually, however, we must prepare for another increase. Our democracy, more complex every year, demands a high average of education on the part of our citizens. In the long run, this need can be met only by a much wider spread of college training than we have yet considered feasible.

Arkansas' Example

THE Jackson News calls attention to the fact that Arkansas, once the most derided state in the Union, now ranks third among all of the states of the nation in highway construction.

Last year, Arkansas constructed 1,675 miles of permanent highways, as compared with a total of 29,000 for the entire United States.

"Arkansas," says the News, "like Mississippi, imposes a gasoline tax of five cents a gallon for road purposes. But, unlike Mississippi, Arkansas is spending that five-cent gasoline tax wisely and judiciously."

Editor Sullens might have gone further with his comparison. He could have stated that in Arkansas no ad valorem taxes are imposed for road purposes. All local road bond issues have been absorbed by the State, and the Arkansas tax burden is now actually less than half that of Mississippi.

The publishers of this newspaper own considerable property in Arkansas, hence these statements are not hearsay, but are actual facts which can be substituted by tax receipts on similar properties in the two states.—*West Point, (Miss.) Times-LeaderA Frisky Route

FOUR Russian aviators, attempting a flight from Moscow to New York via Alaska, have been having a hard time of it. Atrocious weather conditions have delayed them repeatedly and have time and again put them in considerable peril.

Triumphant over these handicaps, the Russians have proven their skill and courage as aviators. But their trip, it would seem, has also proven something else—that the Aleutian Islands air lane between Asia and America is an almighty hard one for flyers. It begins to look as if the future air route to the Orient will have to follow some less arduous course than this.

Sips That Pass in the Night!WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—It is true, of course, that Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald did not spend their hours together cooking up an Anglo-American alliance.

It is also presumably true that no selfish nationalistic thoughts ever entered the head of either of them. That is, there was no thought that the United States or Great Britain would profit from this epochal meeting out of proportion to the benefits available to all other nations which cared to enter into the spirit of the thing.

For there is no getting around the fact that America and Britain are far and away the two most powerful nations on the earth. If they did care to form an alliance in the old sense they could easily enough dominate the world without fear of any combination of nations which might be formed against them.

And it can hardly be said that the moral alliance which these two have established and which is not in any way exclusive or in any way ominous, would be any the less effective in its way if the important countries of continental Europe were to refuse to play ball. The fact is that France, Italy or Japan could not well afford to toss a monkey-wrench into the Hoover-MacDonald mechanism.

Since MacDonald arrived in this country some distinctly sour notes have been sounded in France, Also some in Italy and even a few in Japan. There are those in each country who scent an alliance with the United States and Great Britain it is going to be just too bad—for them. Naturally enough, the naval arms conference at Geneva blew up when these two predominant naval partners failed to approach an agreement. The same thing would have been true had France and Italy been represented, which they were not.

But if the United States and Great Britain are going to lead off an international parade for reductions of armaments and world peace, any lesser nations which stand on the curb and stick out their tongues are likely to be out of luck. There are few places where their attitude would be popular and, most importantly of all, it would be distinctly unpopular with Uncle Sam and John Bull, both of whose people are enthusiastic over this new order of things.

Where the boys in blue lie sleeping
Till the dawning of the day,
Near the grand Potomac River,
There too sleep our boys in gray.

'And his told, a quaint old story
(Be it false, or be it true!)
How the North had not to honor
All the men who wore the blue.

Oratory, words of praise,
With the sound of martial music,
They had met with wreaths and flowers,

Thus to decorate their graves.

Far below them, in the valley,
Sleep our boys who wore the gray;
But no tear fell in their memory;
Not a flower, had they that day.

But as night came o'er the landscape,
Stars looked down, like eyes that weep,
On those lonely graves so barren,
Where our brothers lie asleep.

by Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

"Ashe will get someone to drive you to the station," she said. "I'm sorry you won't stay, Shallimar."

"My dear, I mustn't. My work is out in the world, making men suffer."

She said it lightly but there was in her eyes the shadow of pain. The maid came and carried down the lighter pieces of her luggage.

"Send Ashe up for these immediately," Helen directed, pointing to the others.

When he came she told him to have her car and someone to drive it at the door without delay. She was forcing herself, by sheer will power, to keep her mind on Shallimar's departure and speed her departure.

She was sorry to lose her friend now when it would have been a great relief to know there was someone in the house besides the servants and Mrs. Wethering. But Shallimar did not want to stay; she could see that—it would be selfish to urge her.

"You must watch yourself, dear," Shallimar said in parting. "Don't let your heart break if you can help it. If you want a man get him. It isn't always possible but you can try. You see, I think your illness is of the heart, no matter what you say."

Helen did not need to deny it. Shallimar was obliged to run, with not a moment to spare. She waved back from the door, a gay farewell, but there was pity in her heart for the girl who could not run away from her trouble.

Helen sat very quiet for a moment, glad to be alone, but dispairingly aware that the only person who might have been sympathetic was gone. She could have talked to Shallimar—at least she could have confided that she was faced with a heart-breaking alternative.

And Shallimar was gone. A faint, exotic perfume lingered in the room as a reminder of her colorful personality. Suddenly Helen wanted to get away from it.

She slipped out of the room like a writhing and found her way blindly to her own cushion-covered chaise longue. She lay there a long time, too crushed to think constructively.

A well of black despair had engulfed her. She could not marry Brent—she could not. And yet there seemed to be a force which she could not defy that pressed the words, "You will, you will, you will," upon her brain like brands of fire.

She was helpless against the pictures that rose in her mind. Prison—confinement within a narrow cell—she who loved the stars over her head and grass under her feet—eyes to spy upon her; perhaps, when she lay asleep—horrible!

A shudder ran like lightning over her slender frame.

She struggled to turn her thoughts away from such a fate and fasten them upon Bob. Bob! It was even greater torture to dwell upon him. Just when they had ended their foolish quarrel—when happiness unbelievable sweet had come to them—this!

Until that moment, when the full import of what had befallen her swept over Helen, she had not guessed how cruel are some of the tricks of Fate.

Mrs. Wethering came to ask her where she would have her luncheon served, as it was Helen's habit to take it in any place that suited her mood.

She was denied entrance. But Helen was fast becoming an enigma to her, beginning with Helen's association with Eva Ennis, so she asked her question through the door and went away without protest when Helen answered that she did not want any lunch.

Late in the afternoon Helen went out. Mrs. Wethering saw her walking toward the lake. When the time grew past the dinner hour and she had not returned, the housekeeper became alarmed and went into conference with Ashe about it.

"I'm afraid," she said, "that something has happened to Miss Nellin."

CHAPTER XLV

Helen was found sitting beside the lake, chilled but indifferent to her discomfort. In the darkness she seemed a part of the rustic bench on which she sat, so still was she.

Ashe spoke to her in a low-pitched voice, impeded with a sense of tragic unhappiness in her attitude.

She answered quietly that she would not have dinner—they need not keep it waiting for her.

"But might I suggest, miss that the air is growing chilly?" Ashe said uneasily.

Helen stirred and looked about her, noticing for the first time that daylight had completely gone and a mist was hanging over the shore of the lake. She shivered slightly, got up and walked up the path to the house.

She went to her room and refused Mrs. Wethering's frequently repeated offer to bring her tray. Presently, she locked her door, but a little later the housekeeper was "No," Eva stubbornly shook her head. "Oh, but you must," Helen insisted.

"Why?" Eva asked pitifully. "I have something to say to Leonard, Helen. I don't know why you want to see him, but . . . Bob told me about last night . . . I got out of him, and Mrs. Wethering said you weren't really ill."

"Oh, Helen, you aren't going to marry Leonard, are you? You can't! After all those things you said . . ."

"Stop, please stop," Helen begged.

"But why did you refuse to see Bob? He was almost insanely happy over your promise to marry him and then . . . then . . ."

"I can't tell you anything—until I've seen Leonard," Helen said miserably. "Do this for me, Eva; go now."

"If I thought that it would help Bob, I'd go," Eva answered. "I know I owe you more than I ever can repay, Helen, but this is something . . . I only want to ask Leonard if he is going to marry you. You see what it means to me. But I'd wait for Bob's sake."

"Then do go, do hurry," Helen pleaded. "It may mean a great deal to Bob."

Eva reluctantly gathered up her hat and coat. As she put them on her eyes fell upon Brent's desk. It was open—the desk he kept locked. She saw a pile of notepaper carelessly stuck at one side and it gave her the idea of leaving a note for him.

She decided soon after breakfast to go to New York. Mrs. Wethering persuaded her against it. She must show her proof! She couldn't stand another moment of suspense.

It would be less frightening to be without hope entirely than knowing herself to be clinging to a doubtful one.

sible exposure that might land her in prison, came to her as she made the next move in the game. It was enough to frustrate Brent.

"She turned and ran toward the door. Brent had not expected her to do that—to be so quick to grasp the fact that the locket was evidence he wished to conceal at any cost.

Helen gained the foyer before he came after her. She reached the door, jerked it open and flew out into the hall just a few steps ahead of him. She was fast, but a short distance from the elevator Brent had almost caught up with her. Helen heard him calling viciously to her to stop and her heart sank.

She dared not call for help, and unless there was an elevator on the floor she never would escape with the locket.

"Stop, please stop," Helen begged.

"But why did you refuse to see Bob? He was almost insanely happy over your promise to marry him and then . . . then . . .

What Dry Army's Broom Did

The house lower right), at Highland, N. J. is alleged to have been the "fortress" headquarters of a bootlegging syndicate which is said to have made $2,000,000 profit in six months. It is shown as it appeared the day after federal dry raiders swept the Jersey coast October 16. Viewing the tanks, the estate, is a government agent. Whether it was meant for liquor or oil had not been determined. Also on the estate is the uncompleted garage (lower left), with 12-foot doors that would admit large trucks. The Albion Hotel (above), on the Shrewsbury River at Highlands, houses forty of the syndicate's alleged workers.

Eva caught the significance of the motion "Oh no, no!" she screamed. While they waited for him Helen had time to collect her thoughts and face her new situation.

Brent was dead.

Helen's evident concern over her death meant to her. While he had come to make all possible speed, he had not come to Helen in a flash. loss had around his capacity. He sensed a reward. His eyes opened suddenly toward a bit of gleaming gold that lay on

Boxing Contests In New Arena Will Be Held Weekly On Friday Nights

Leavelle Completes Job Arranging Place for First Show Friday Night When Hall and Mitchell Are Slated To Step Ten Rounds.

Tex Leavelle has completed deal of pleasure that Jack Matlock will be showing here again soon. He is in Cotton Valley, La., this week for a bout with Herschel Dean there next Tuesday night and expects to drop off in Hope for a visit before returning to Dallas, incidentally trying to stage a match here with either McRae or Haverton.

As a christening card for the new arena Leavelle offers Johnny Hall and Bill Mitchell, two blacks that fans here have long wished to see in action. They are under contract for the scrap here Friday night and while one boxing guess is as good as another there's a hunch playing around this scriber's think-tank that one of the fastest fighters is a fox and dangerous as long as he can stand up there and swing a fist.

is bad stuff for an Irishman. A Mick won't admit anybody can whip him."

Both the Walker and Hudkins camps are in full swing. The champ is doing his preliminary work at Pa Soper's ranch in the Ojai Mountains.

Hudkins Threat Spurs Walker

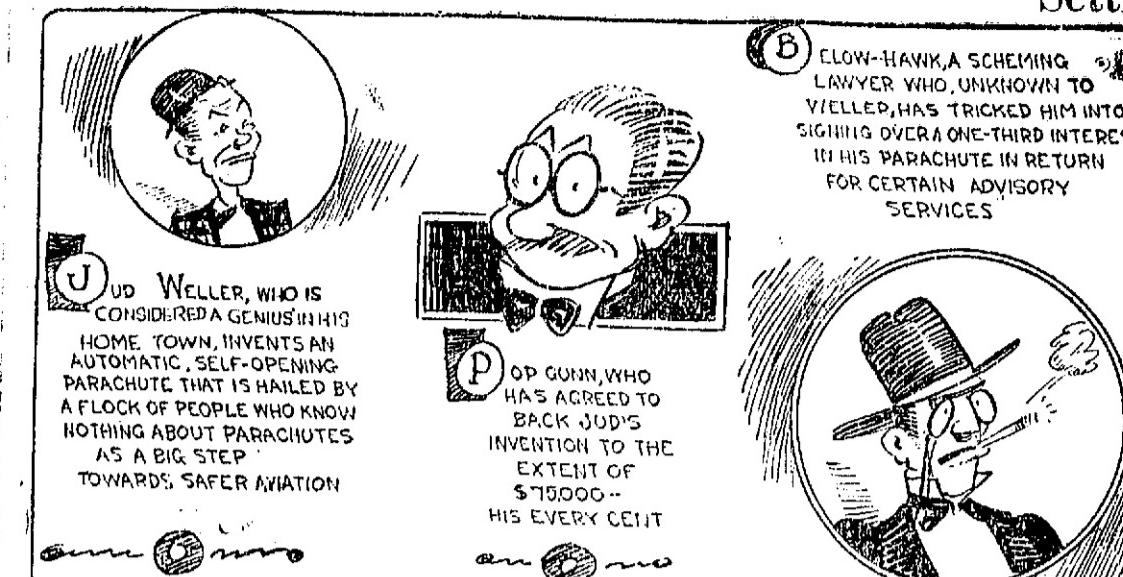

Mickey Walker doesn't mind telling anybody that his approaching scrap with Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, in Los Angeles, Oct. 29, will be the toughest battle his extended career has brought him. Of course Mickey, like every other champion, would say that very thing, but this particular setto leads one to think Walker is speaking the truth.

"I ain't kidding you when I say that I think Hudkins is a great fighter," the toy bulldog says. "He's got lots more stuff than most folks credit him for."

Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, is driving the middleweight champ hard in his training for this bout. The Doctor knows the value of a championship and he doesn't care to have his man lose it because of not being in shape.

"Some of my friends have told me the Ace is going to knock me out this time," Walker says. "That

Tulane Finally Wins

When passing out the bouquets for the phenomenal football d'etat, mentor of Tulane University's Green Wave, Bierman's eleven did something no other Tulane team ever accomplished—beat Texas A&M.

Today all New Orleans is for Bierman, whether or not his team wins another game this season. His well-coached aggregation battered a heavier Aggie team through four periods of torrid football, under blazing sun, to win by a score of 13 to 10.

Over a long period of years Tulane has met reverse after reverse from Texas Aggie teams. In fact, Tulane had scored only 11 points, compared to 168 by the Aggies. Consequently, Bierman's outfit did two notable pieces of work—scoring more points in one game than they had amassed in all previous games, in addition to taking the first Tulane victory over a Texas Aggie football team.

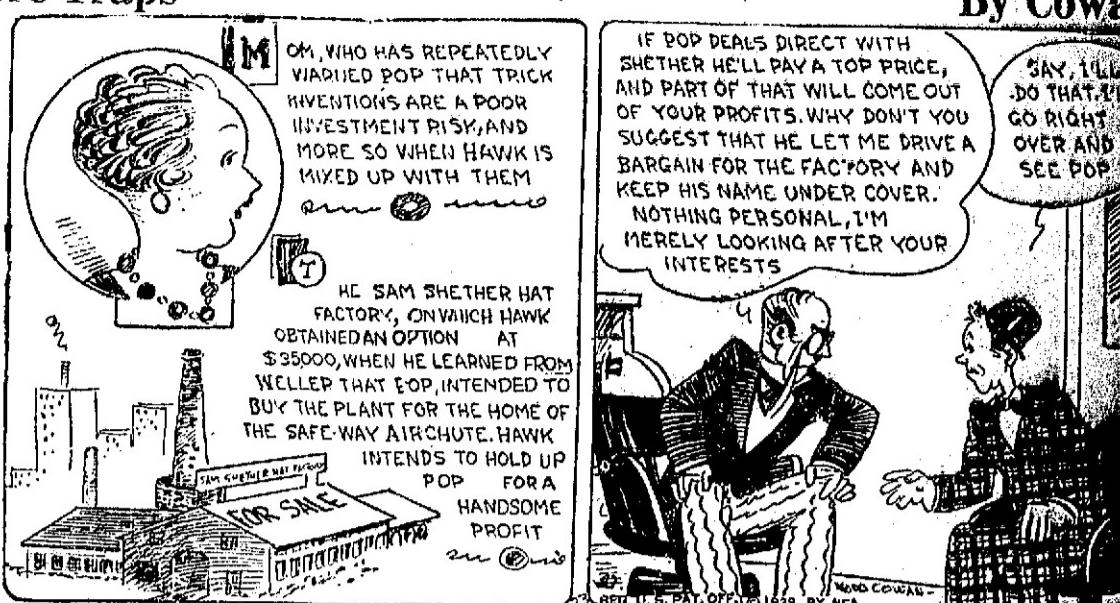

Young May Retire

Crafty Lou Young, manufacturer of strong football teams at the University of Pennsylvania and known by his "hidden ball" tricks as the gridiron magician, will wind up his coaching career at the close of the 1929 season, according to more or less well-founded rumors afloat in Philadelphia.

Young is to become graduate manager of athletics at the Quaker school, the report states. The post has been vacant since the death of Ernie Cozens.

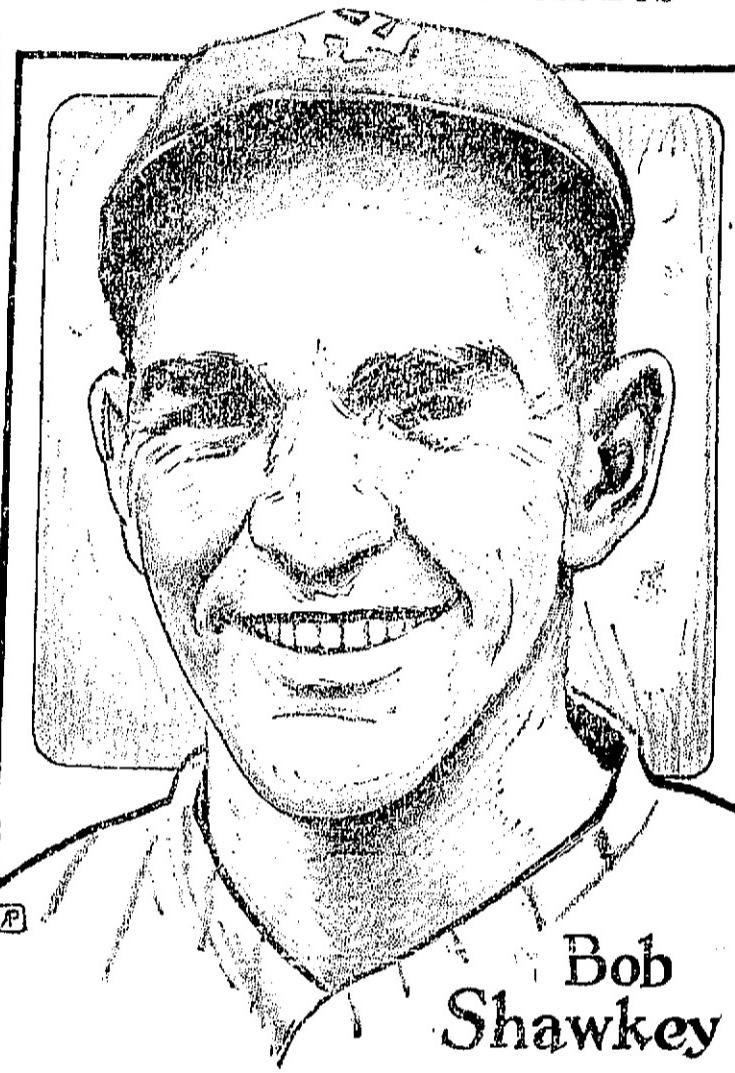

That Young is admirably adapt-

Sailor Bob Becomes Boss Bob

This is the man the Yankees will look to for guidance in the 1930 campaign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(P)—Of all the new managers trying their luck next season none will be watched more closely than Bob Shawkey.

Given a one-year contract as the head of one of the game's outstanding teams, Shawkey will get some careful watching right in his home predict. For it will be up to him to keep harmony on Colonel Jake Ruppert's high-powered club and to keep that Yankee stadium well filled.

That is quite an assignment. It is an assignment that found several non-takers around the major league circuits. But if Sailor Bob had the courage to accept the job it seems logical that he will not lack for courage when it comes to handing out orders to Babe Ruth and the other big shots on the Yankee roster.

gram the guests and their hosts and hostesses were invited into the Library where an informal reception was held, while Mr. C. Hines of this city, gave a brilliant musical program and the members of the B. & P. W. club served a delightful ice course.

The presentation of past division presidents was made by Mrs. Gus Haynes, with the response by Mrs. Dora Goolsby of Fort Smith. The presentation of Honorary Presidents was made by Mrs. W. H. McCain of Cotton Plant, with the response by Mrs. C. E. Reyston of Fulton.

In the presentation of flowers, Hon. E. F. McFadden, in behalf of the American Legion presented Mrs. John Weinmann, Division President with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums and Mrs. P. T. White, the incoming president of the Pat Cleburne Chapter in behalf of the Chapter, presented Mrs. Weinmann with a basket of yellow chrysanthemums, a corsage of roses to Mrs. Chas. Haynes, the retiring Pat Cleburne president and Mesdames C. S. Lothrop State Historian and Mrs. George Spragins, State Secretary.

"I would have severe headaches and would have to stay in bed a day or two at a time. I tried different remedies; did not get relief.

"I read of Black-Draught, and decided to try it, and have never been sorry I did, for it gave me relief quicker than anything I have ever tried."

"And now, whenever I feel the least symptom (of constipation) I take Black-Draught, and that keeps off the headaches. I am much better since I began taking it, and I gladly recommend it to my friends."

Deamom," a Universal Western Feature, will open at the New Grand Wednesday. It is another of the thrilling western melodramas directed by Ray Taylor.

The story is an original by Basil Dickey, well-known author of screen plays. In writing "The Ridin' Deamom," Dickey took into consideration all the capabilities of the star and consequently Wells is called upon to display his talents as a stunt and trick rider in scene after scene.

Wells performs exceptionally well in "The Ridin' Deamom." Considered the best trick horseman on the screen today, Wells gives his audience thrill upon thrill by the reckless manner in which he rides in and out of dangerous situations.

Hudkins Threat Spurs Walker

Mickey Walker doesn't mind telling anybody that his approaching scrap with Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, in Los Angeles, Oct. 29, will be the toughest battle his extended career has brought him. Of course Mickey, like every other champion, would say that very thing, but this particular setto leads one to think Walker is speaking the truth.

"I ain't kidding you when I say that I think Hudkins is a great fighter," the toy bulldog says. "He's got lots more stuff than most folks credit him for."

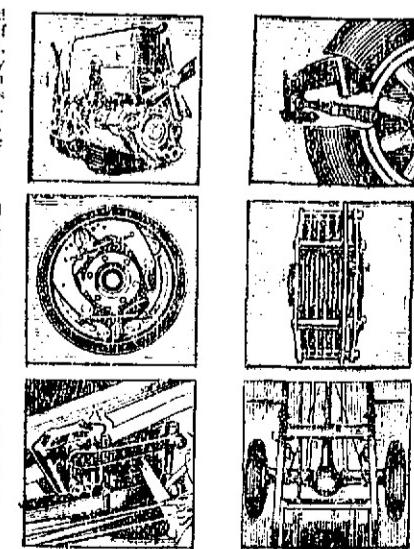

Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, is driving the middleweight champ hard in his training for this bout. The Doctor knows the value of a championship and he doesn't care to have his man lose it because of not being in shape.

"Some of my friends have told me the Ace is going to knock me out this time," Walker says. "That

BUICKS

The world-famous Buick chassis and Buick's smart new Bodies by Fisher! An unrivaled combination! Providing the highest degree of motor car performance and all-round motoring satisfaction, over the greatest number of miles!

The more thoroughly you compare Buick with other cars, the more clearly you will understand why more than 2,000,000 people have bought Buicks—why men and women are buying from two to five times as many Buicks as any other automobile priced above

Buick's Controlled Servo Enclosed Motorized Brakes provide the most perfect control ever devised for any automobile. The brakes are silent in operation, and achieve positive results with minimum pedal pressure. And best of all they are enclosed fully protected against dust and water—they insure maximum braking efficiency in any weather.

Buick's famous torque tube serves two vital important functions. It not only transmits the power throughout the entire turning range, while the new Buick Road Shock Eliminator provides smooth transmission of road jolts and jolts to the driving arms. Twin features which make a tremendous contribution to driving ease and roadability.

Buick's new frictionless steering gear imparts matches steering ease throughout the entire turning range, while the new Buick Road Shock Eliminator provides smooth transmission of road jolts and jolts to the driving arms.

Buick's famous torque tube serves two vital important functions. It not only transmits the power throughout the entire turning range, while the new Buick Road Shock Eliminator provides smooth transmission of road jolts and jolts to the driving arms.

New longer rear springs, in conjunction with our new Liverpool-Dio-draught Shock Absorbers, impart a superlative degree of riding comfort.

The dual control factors work together in perfect harmony to check both bound and rebound over the roughest roads.

*The engine in the 124 and 132-inch Buicks develops 99 horsepower, and that in the 118-inch Buicks 80 1/2 horsepower.

the future work of the U. D. G.

At this time Mrs. Meinhorn accepted the gavel, and presided over the greeting from the visiting state president, Miss Kate Daffin of Ennis, Tex., who is President of the Texas Division. Greeting from Patriotic Societies from the Daughters of the American Revolution by Mrs. Martin L. Sigmund, of Pine Bluff, from the Daughters of 1812 by Mrs. Chas. H. Miller of Little Rock, from the American Legion Auxiliary by Miss Sue Jones, Mrs. S. P. Davis of Little Rock who has had more national honors than any other woman in the state, was presented and gave a short address of greeting.

The presentation of past division presidents was made by Mrs. Gus Haynes, with the response by Mrs. Dora Goolsby of Fort Smith. The presentation of Honorary Presidents was made by Mrs. W. H. McCain of Cotton Plant, with the response by Mrs. C. E. Reyston of Fulton.

In the presentation of flowers, Hon. E. F. McFadden, in behalf of the American Legion presented Mrs. John Weinmann, Division President with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums and Mrs. P. T. White, the incoming president of the Pat Cleburne Chapter in behalf of the Chapter, presented Mrs. Weinmann with a basket of yellow chrysanthemums, a corsage of roses to Mrs. Chas. Haynes, the retiring Pat Cleburne president and Mesdames C. S. Lothrop State Historian and Mrs. George Spragins, State Secretary.

"I would have severe headaches and would have to stay in bed a day or two at a time. I tried different remedies; did not get relief.

"I read of Black-Draught, and decided to try it, and have never been sorry I did, for it gave me relief quicker than anything I have ever tried."

"And now, whenever I feel the least symptom (of constipation) I take Black-Draught, and that keeps off the headaches. I am much better since I began taking it, and I gladly recommend it to my friends."

Costs only 1 cent a dose.
